Press Release

Sector figures from the Director Aid Winding-Up Petition Index

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE (SECTOR: CONSTRUCTION)

115 Winding-Up Petitions Advertised Against Construction Companies in Four Weeks

115 winding-up petitions were advertised against companies in construction in England and Wales in the four weeks to 18 October 2026, about 22% of all petitions advertised in that period, according to the Director Aid Winding-Up Petition Index, published by Director Aid. It was the sector with the most petitions.

Across all sectors, 443 petitions were advertised in September 2026, 59% of them presented by HMRC. Of the petitions advertised since 8 September 2026 whose hearing was at least three weeks ago, 39% have been followed by a winding-up order. The first hearing is typically listed about 12 days after a petition is advertised, which is usually the point at which the company's bank freezes its account.

> Alastair Redfern, Solicitor and founder of Director Aid, said: "HMRC presented 59% of the petitions advertised in the month, and that is the figure directors should notice: tax arrears are the most common route to a petition by a wide margin. Construction is again the sector with the most petitions, which reflects how late payment up the chain turns into tax arrears at the bottom of it. A petition is advertised before the hearing, and the bank usually freezes the account when it is. The companies that come through are the ones that took advice in the few days in between."

> "In construction the pattern is familiar: late payment up the chain becomes an HMRC arrears problem, and HMRC petitions rather than negotiates. The directors who keep their companies are the ones who deal with the petition before it is advertised."

WHAT DIRECTORS SHOULD DO WHEN A PETITION ARRIVES

- Note the hearing date and work out the earliest date the petition can be advertised: seven business days after service.
- Stop non-essential payments from the company's account: payments after the petition was presented can be void if a winding-up order follows.
- Check whether the debt is genuinely disputed, and take advice before the advertisement date, when the most options are open.
